

Pat Lang, Artist

Pat Lang, a native Marylander, is primarily a self-taught artist. She began painting in her late teens, learning through trial and error; visiting galleries to study famous works; and reading art instruction publications. As she experimented on techniques new to her, she used these experiences to master her own personal style.

Statement by the Artist

“It would be difficult to image a life without painting. Art has always been an important part of my life since childhood school days. I find it to be a form of mediation. When I paint time doesn't exist. Hours pass as if only minutes have elapsed. My subjects vary to include landscapes, animals, seascapes and still life. After many years of painting, I continue to challenge myself. Learning and growing in my art never ends, as the process for each new work shows me not only where I am now, but where I want to go.”

Pat has received numerous awards for her oil paintings.
